Use the United States map to do the following:

Follow your favorite sports team as it travels around the country. First, mark and label the team's home city, and state. Then label each city and state the team visits, and indicate whether your team won or lost. How far did your favorite team travel to each of its games? (For each trip, draw a line from the home city to the host city and indicate the number of miles traveled.)

Follow the travels of a national figure. Label each city and state that he or she visits. Make notes about what happened at each place, and why the person might have chosen to visit a particular place.

Locate the sites where important news events are taking place in the U.S. Label each city and state in which an event takes place, using different colors to represent different types of events (political, economic, environmental, social). Do you see any pattern?

Name as many states as you can and check your answers on the back.
